TERRORIZES WOMEN.—An unknown man, whom the police have so far been unable to arrest, has been terrorizing women living in the vicinity of Seventh South and West Temple streets for the past two weeks, and the male residents are so aroused over the matter that if the man is caught it is likely to go hard with him. The man, it is asserted, lurks in the shadow of trees bordering the street and when women unaccompanied by male escorts are passing, he springs in front of them, and stopping them, insults them by words and gestures. Several women have been frightened almost out of their senses and their husbands and masculine friends have searched for the miscreant without success.

DEATH OF A PIONEER

As the result of his trip, Mr. McClellan has entered into negotiations with a Denver writer to compose a light opera. The librettist, whose name is withheld for the present, was formerly a dramatic critic and has some ability, too, as a writer of varse. He conceived the idea of a romantic opera, the scenario to be in old Mexico, and knowing Mr. McClellan's ability, asked him to consider taking hold of the musical part of it. The organist went to Denver to read the manuscript and brought portions of it home, having agreed to write the music. He considers the libretto a very able effort and will put in all his spare time completing his part of the agreement.

Mr. McClellan has written a good many splendid piaces of music. He has, in fact, a trunk full of unpublished things, some of which will be incorporated in the new opera. The authors will endeavor to follow Smith-Herbert style and their friends are predicting a worthy creation. Mary Ellen Kimball, Wife of Late Heber C. Kimball, Passes Away.
